FINAL CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

Final Call for Abstracts! Abstract Submission is extended till Tuesday 08 January 2019 for the Alaska Chapter of the Wildlife Society Annual Meeting, to be held in Juneau, at the Elizabeth Peratrovich Hall, from 26-28 February 2019. Follow this link to submit your abstract: <http://twsalaskameeting.com/>. Our theme this year is Forest-Wildlife Relationships and our keynote speakers will be Dr. Sophie Gilbert and Matt Kirchhoff who both have extensive expertise researching forest-wildlife relationships, specifically in SE-Alaska.

As always, submissions of all fields relevant to wildlife are welcome and encouraged. Submit your abstract to either the General Session or one of our two special sessions: Effects of Young-growth Management, Recreation, and Climate Change on Wildlife or the Spark Session, a fast-paced session featuring 5 minute presentations in a unique way of connecting ideas, engaging the audience and eliciting discussion about anything and everything we're passionate about in the wildlife profession.

Workshops are filling up. If you are interested to participate in one of them, indicate your interest via registration or sending an email to twsalaska@gmail.com as soon as possible. Workshops offered on 26 February, include "A practical introduction to GIS for wildlife biologists" and "Design and Analysis of Capture-Mark-Recapture Studies with a focus on Occupancy Modeling".

The 27 and the 28 of February will be two full days of poster and oral presentations. Additional conference details are posted and will be updated on our website: <http://twsalaskameeting.com/>.
